

Hunt for Slayer Of Movie Extra

LONDON, (CP) -- Scotland Yard detectives Sunday sought the slayer of Mrs. Margery Gardner, 33-year-old English film extra, whose bruised body with legs and arms broken was found in a wildly-disordered room of a fashionable West End hotel.

Detectives sought to question a tall, fair-haired English colonel, said to be well known in society circles, concerning the actress' death, but his connection with the case was not disclosed.

Police said a post-mortem showed Mrs. Gardner had died of suffocation.

New Field Opened Physical Education

JASPER, (CP) -- The 1946 convention of the Canadian Physical Education association wound up Sunday after a day bearing a message from Dr. Josephine Rathbone of Columbia University, New York, that the war had opened up a new professional field of specialized physical education in which corrective exercise and recreation were co-partners.

She said all phases of physical education now have a place in place in the health programs of conditioning and reconditioning. Many army hospitals had learned to group types of patients for wise doses of exercise in rehabilitation.

Churchill Lacks Eden Substitute

LONDON, (CP) -- Anthony Eden has been in Bermuda, the United States and Canada for weeks but no bright young Conservative has prepared to take his place on the opposition front bench in the commons.

Winston Churchill himself has performed minor chores of leadership daily such as asking government plans for future business and arrangements for debates.

Apart from Mr. Eden there seems to be no one upon whom he leans. His friends say they regret to see his high profile of democracy at war become involved in petty bickering of a parliament discussing minor business.

His temper is still tempestuous. During an important debate on the proposed withdrawal of British forces from Egypt he showed his disgust for the government by licking out his tongue when words could not be heard above the tumult.

Mr. Churchill said in New York last January he had no intention of quitting Conservative leadership until the party saw its way clear to make better arrangements for leadership "which I earnestly hope they may be able to do."

Eden to Receive Honorary Degree

OTTAWA, (CP) -- Looking grave and notables older than on his last visit, Rt. Hon. Anthony Eden, arrived here Sunday with a party of British parliamentarians, among them a delegation from the Empire Parliamentary association conference in Bermuda, and said he wouldn't exclude any proposal from the "profitable conferences in future." He will receive an honorary degree from the University of Toronto next Thursday.

After he had shaken hands with an official welcoming party he was surrounded by reporters.

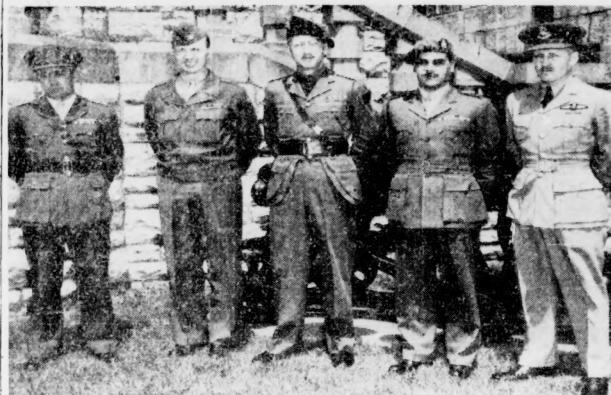

When asked to comment "briefly" on the world situation, he chuckled and said: "You just take the country's world situation and see if it can be commented on briefly."

DAIRY FIELD DAY

Empire and U.S. Officers at Post-War Staff College

The first post-war staff college in the British Commonwealth opened at Kingston, Ont., recently. For the first time in the history of the Canadian army staff colleges have been authorized to practice, and among the 70 officers attending the initial course are representatives of the British, Indian and United States armies and the R.C.A.F., in addition to Canadian Army officers. Of the 13 instructors eight will be Canadian, three British Army, one U.S. Army, and one R.C.A.F. Above, left to right, is a representative group attending the first course: Lt.-Col. E.V. Molyneux of Breconshire, Wales; Lt.-Col. V.J. Gilbert, Boise, Idaho; Maj. W.H. Mitchell, Toronto, Ont.; Mrs. George Bharat Sawk Singh of India and Squadron Leader Andrew Tilley of the R.C.A.F., Ottawa.

South Africa Union Accused By India of Discrimination

NEW YORK, (AP) -- India filed a formal complaint with the United Nations Sunday night charging the Union of South Africa with discrimination against approximately 250,000 Indians in South Africa.

The complaint, filed by Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar, president of the Indian delegation, called on Secretary-General Trygve Lie to place the case before the general assembly which meets Sept. 3.

Sir Ramaswami said the difficulties already had caused India to terminate her trade agreement with South Africa, recall her high commission and the situation now is so serious, he said, it threatens "to impair friendly relations between India and South Africa."

Meanwhile, it appeared almost certain that the general assembly also would be called upon to act on Poland's charges that Franco Spain was a threat to world peace.

The Indian complaint will be the first to go directly to the general assembly instead of the security council.

Under the charter, cases which threaten international peace are handled by the council, while those which merely threaten to impair friendly relations can be taken to the assembly.

German Corporal Acquitted Of Slaying Fellow Prisoner

MOSCOW, (AP) -- A six-man Alberta supreme court jury late Saturday acquitted L.Cpl. Johannes Wittlinger, German prisoner-of-war, of a charge of murder laid against him in connection with the slaying of another prisoner, August Pleszek, in the Moscow Hat Internment camp almost three years ago.

The jury deliberated almost 28 hours before returning the acquittal verdict. Chief Justice Howson discharged Wittlinger into the custody of Canadian authorities.

Canada's Constitution

The desire of the Canadian government to increase the membership of the house of commons from the present 245 to 255, retaining the old proportional basis, has been received with the other provinces, is not seriously opposed in any section of the house. What has been opposed is the method by which the government would secure the necessary agreement with the British North America Act.

It would do this by means of a joint address by the senate and house of commons to the parliament of the United Kingdom, without prior consultation with the provinces.

The Progressive Conservative opposition, members of the Social Credit group and a few Quebec independents voted for consultation with the provinces, while the U.P.C. and U.F.C.W. supported the government.

The proposed redistribution amendment to the B.N.A. Act has been discussed at some length in the house. Its terms have been explained more than once in these columns.

It does seem that this is a matter that concerns only the dominion parliament and the people of Canada as a whole.

The proposed redistribution, which increases the number of seats in the lower house by ten seats, does not disturb the mathematical relationship of Quebec's representation with that of the other provinces, as defined in the original B.N.A. Act.

In this instance, we think that most Canadians will be inclined to agree with Justice Minister St. Laurent that the federal government "does not derive its entire authority from the provinces and does not need to go back to the provinces in order to say what Canada shall be in the future."

Nevertheless, the present debate emphasizes the need, as have others in the past, for an agreement between the dominion and the provinces on an acceptable method by which Canada may be able to amend or even change its constitution.

True, the Imperial parliament would hardly refuse to amend the B.N.A. Act if requested to do so by a joint address of the senate and house of commons of Canada. But it would not be necessary for an independent and sovereign state to ask another to amend its constitution for it.

It is understandable that Quebec, with the existing set up a special safeguard of her "minority interests", but many in that province have been most insistent on Canadian independence.

We have it now in external affairs--except for such absurdities as the dominion's refusal to sign treaties, such as international labor agreements, that affect "property and civil rights", because these are "exclusively" provincial rights.

But we have not got national standards, because old judicial interpretations of the Privy Council read into "provincial rights" things that the Fathers of Confederation did not put into the original British North America Act, which is the Canadian constitution.

Comment on Fred Rose

In passing sentence on Fred Rose, after the former Labor Progressive M.P. had been convicted of conspiracy to commit a unlawfully secret communication, Mr. Justice Lazare said a few words which are worth quoting at some length. They undoubtedly express the general feeling in this unhappy affair.

The poet who exclaimed "not so rare as a day in June" must have experienced some like those we have here in that month, when the sun is gold, the sky blue and the earth green.

When Canada Needs Coal

Just at a time when central Canada is desperately in need of every ton of coal the mines in the east and west can ship, the United Mine Workers of America, Alberta division, announces that its 6,000 members will cut production in this province by several thousand tons on Wednesday.

It appears that Alberta's six thousand miners will stage a one-day strike in protest against the provincial Workmen's Compensation Board.

Surely, there are better ways to express their views of the compensation board than by stopping production in a coal-hungry country!

Surely, this is not responsible labor leadership!

Tax-Paying Farmers

The great gain in prairie farm income has been reflected in the really startling increase in three years in the number of farmers assessed for income tax purposes.

According to official figures, the house of commons the other day, 29,129 Canadian farmers were taxed on 1944 income. This compares with 7,373 in 1941.

Figures for the four western provinces in some instances show even more amazing difference. They are presented here in parallel columns for easier comparison:

| | 1944 | 1941 |
|--------------|--------|-------|
| Manitoba | 7,614 | 580 |
| Saskatchewan | 10,113 | 2,179 |
| Alberta | 3,921 | 1,579 |
| B.C. | 2,523 | 582 |

The income gains reflected by such figures are supported by the increase in farm mortgage indebtedness on the prairies and in general farm spending in recent years.

Given another year of two of good crops and stabilized prices, western farmers will be virtually out of debt.

India Situation Brighter

The confusing and contradictory statements of Indian leaders make it difficult to determine what progress is being made in the negotiations for Indian self-government. However, all parties are in substantial agreement on the terms of the constitution of India proposed by the British cabinet mission. The argument now is over the composition of the interim government which is to take over until the new constitution has been adopted.

These controversies illustrate once more the deadly fear and mistrust between the Moslems and the Hindus. Each group is desperately afraid lest the other get too much power in the proposed government, and will it damage its rival. Hence the anxious care with which the allocation of cabinet posts is scrutinized.

Representation according to population would give the Hindus a commanding majority, of course out of the question. The Moslems would never accept it. Accordingly the British plan calls for equal representation of the two great powers with the balance of power divided by representatives of four smaller sects, the Sikhs, the Parsees, the Indian Christians and the Untouchables.

The peculiar beauty of this scheme is that none of these minority groups is particularly friendly to either Moslem or Hindu. There is little danger that they would form a permanent bloc with one or the other; they are more likely to throw their support from side to side.

This may lead to an era of intrigue and logrolling, but it is better than having the administration break down completely as it would certainly do if either Moslems or Hindus found themselves permanently out-voted. Since the British solution is the only practicable one, it seems certain to be adopted eventually. Nevertheless the current difficulties have shown once again the difficulties that lie in the way of giving India a working system of self-government.

Here and There

The poet who exclaimed "not so rare as a day in June" must have experienced some like those we have here in that month, when the sun is gold, the sky blue and the earth green.

In England, a man who conducted "Crime Doesn't Pay" programs on the B.B.C. has been sentenced to three years for shopbreaking. No doubt he was seeking to teach by example as well as by precept.

Cheap Japanese goods will soon be on the market again--and compared with what some Canadian manufacturers have been getting away with lately, they may look like quality merchandise.

The Third Column

VANCOUVER 'PROVINCE' STRIKE
Recent Editorial in Vancouver News - Herald

For more than 43 years, the Vancouver Daily Province has come out each week-day to meet the demands of large concentrations of readers. Starting on a modest basis with four pages, it long ago attained metropolitan size and established itself as one of Canada's leading dailies. Yesterday, it failed to appear, its printers are on strike.

The strike, British Columbia readers will be interested to know, arose out of no circumstances of conditions within the Province. It was inspired and directed from outside. The Province printers had an agreement with the management with which they had expressed entire satisfaction. That agreement had been rewritten only longer ago than November 8, last, by Woodruff Randolph, president of the International Typographical Union. It was workable and was working.

Now it has been cancelled, not because the union members in Vancouver wished it cancelled, but because of the insistence of the representative in Canada of the I.T.U. The strike vote, taken on Wednesday, was the outcome of pressure exerted by the international agent.

In exerting this pressure, the international agent was acting, not in the interests of the Province printers whose whole union lives, but have been disrupted by inflation, but to save his own face.

Last November this international representative called out the printers on two Winnipeg newspapers, the Tribune and the Free Press, in an effort to ensure the acceptance of his agreement. Instead of saving his end, he suffered a signal defeat. The Winnipeg newspapers not only did not sign the agreement, they established an open shop, and are still operating under it. Now, this defeated representative, for his own purposes, brings turmoil to four Canadian cities. Vancouver is the latest among them.

The declared object of the strike is to compel the Southam Company, Limited, which owns the Province and newspapers in several other Canadian cities, to negotiate a single master agreement for all its employees. The international representative hopes to have Winnipeg included in the agreement and thus regain his lost prestige.

In endeavouring to put his plan into effect, however, the I.T.U. agents have ploughed the field of Canada and the territories, and have persuaded the striking Province printers to do the same. The National Wartime Labor Relations Board, the highest labor authority in Canada, has referred the international representative to the Southam Company to negotiate a national basis and has told the I.T.U. that its bargaining rights do not extend over provincial boundaries.

The printers were called out (indefinitely) in the midst of an effort at conciliation initiated by the provincial labor department, and that call-out, on George Pearson, minister of labor, has described as a defiance of the law.

IT SPELLS "WHEAT"

The Baltimore Sun

But why save wheat? Why not continue to eat the normal amount of bread and other wheat products, and then help the food drive by, say, putting in another row of lettuce in the post-war garden? Again the answer is simple. The need is for food-stuffs which will carry well, store well, and then yield a maximum amount of food value when the distribution process is over. That is just another way of spelling "wheat".

It is also another way of spelling "wheat" for wheat is in a paramount degree all those qualities. That is why, from time immemorial, wheat has been the staff of life. That is why voluntary cuts in wheat consumption are the first long step toward helping the starving peoples of the world.

BIBLE MESSAGE

The Lord is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him. It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord. (Lam. 3:22, 26.)

What Are We Waiting For?

The richest man in the world couldn't buy a meal in a restaurant that had no food. That of course is common-place. But the underlying fact does not seem to be so clearly understood. The fact seems to be very widely ignored. This basic fact simply is that money has no purchasing power when the goods which are wanted are not on sale. A pocketful of money is only so much celluloid and worthless metal if the owner of the pocket cannot exchange his money for things he needs or would like to have.

In Canada today there is scarcity of clothing, of building materials, of many kinds of food, of fuel, of motor cars, of implements and tools, of innumerable things which are needed in the home, in industry, which normally can be bought in the store, which which handles the particular line of goods the prospective customer is interested in. There is in fact no kind of household or other supplies which is as plentiful as it used to be.

Normal, normal, the power of money is away below real. It is nil in the case of a would-be purchaser who has not the coupon called for if the thing he wants to buy is so scarce that it is not rationed. The purchasing power of the dollar only varies to the degree that one kind of commodity is less scarce than another.

This scarcity of goods which has been caused by the power of the dollar is artificial mainly. There need not be so many scarcities, and no scarcity need be as drastic as it is. As have the machinery and the means to turn out goods in larger quantities than ever before, and under the slower rate of production than exists in Canada eight years ago. The empty shelves and counters in stores of all sorts could be filling up now, with much expanded, and the buyer getting more for his money.

Then what, in the name of common sense, are we waiting for? Why go on squabbling about who to divide up the supply of under-war money when the scant supply of goods that is causing hardship and inconvenience all across the country?

Dollars and Sentiment

Britain was accused - and blamed for having allegedly tried to keep the Hungarians on the throne in Italy. But it will be noted that it was Mr. Bevin who urged the Big Four foreign ministers to help the new republican government meet its difficulties -- by writing off reparations claims against it.

Foreign sentiment for the republican cause was strong and plentiful when it didn't cost anything. But when Britain tried to stabilize the republican regime by cancelling claims which could easily run into hundreds of millions of dollars, it did not get the backing necessary to make the proposed effective.

The printers were called out (indefinitely) in the midst of an effort at conciliation initiated by the provincial labor department, and that call-out, on George Pearson, minister of labor, has described as a defiance of the law.

If it should ever be needed, the warning to other public men is plain. There are no political or possible political reaction count for anything when the law is evoked to investigate and punish cases of unfaithfulness on the part of those who have been entrusted with representative responsibility. Nothing less than whole-hearted loyalty is good enough on the part of those who aspire to public office.

Today in Europe

By Randolph Churchill
MILAN, Italy -- Memoirs and diaries recently published are enabling the public to form some opinion of Italy's participation in the war and of the method by which she extricated herself from her alliance with the Germans.

"The Ciano Diaries" give an excellent inside picture of the Fascist regime and events from the beginning of 1939 till 1943, when Ciano died.

They reveal Count Galeazzo Ciano's having a far more farsighted view of world events than anyone in Italy. He thought the Axis pact a disaster; he was sure Britain would fight after the collapse of France and never make war with Germany; he never believed Hitler would succeed in conquering Russia.

His diaries reveal the hatred of his father-in-law, Mussolini, for the British. He was friendly with his contacts for the Italians, whom he always regarded as unworthy of his leadership.

Unfortunately, Ciano's diaries do not cover the step leading up to the coup d'etat which overthrew Mussolini, but to the steps leading up to the coup d'etat which overthrew Mussolini. They reveal the earliest plans for the removal of Mussolini dating back to April, 1942, he never referred to these in his diary. Ciano's diaries he thought it too dangerous. And his diaries end well before the actual coup d'etat.

To understand the steps by which the fall of Mussolini was brought about, there are at present two sources which should be studied. One is the series of documents by Count Dino Grandi, formerly Italian Ambassador in London. These give a lively record of the meeting of the Grand Fascist Council on July 24, 1943, when a majority of the Council voted against Mussolini.

General Giuseppe Castellano's book, yet to be published outside of Italy, gives the most complete and unprejudiced account of the events leading up to the coup d'etat.

Both these sources show that getting rid of Mussolini should be divided between General Ambrasio and King Victor Emmanuel. It may be argued that they should have acted earlier, but they did not do so because the effective personalities who took the decisions, shouldered the responsibility, and did the job.

No politician, Fascist or anti-Fascist, played any decisive part in the final stages. Grandi was not informed until late in the day, and the action he took did not affect the course of events.

J. McElroy turned out of his shop, corner of 10th and 11th, by searchers for oil, either by allowing it to disperse itself in the atmosphere or by open-air burning. The open-air burning would heat all Ontario homes for seven days, Alberta has a production outlook of 200 years, with sufficient volume to supply Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec.

Why not? This gas east via C.N.R. right of way? A whole scheme could be devised by a federal government one with co-operation of the provinces concerned.

Considered all angles it decided by the writer and several colleagues "natural gas" can be piped east to Ontario and Quebec and sold "wholesale" at 35 cents per thousand cubic feet.

Each municipality and existing oil company could sell it to the consumer during heating seasons for 90 cents per thousand cubic feet. In other words it means of heat for $9 that would be obtained from one ton of the best anthracite coal.

The Road Ahead

By J. Harper Frower, MILAN.
The greatest obstacle, that "better world", and the greatest enemy of our democracy, is the pressure used by special interest groups, whether they be the fascists, the Nazis, the Communists, or the like.

"The Ciano Diaries" give an excellent inside picture of the Fascist regime and events from the beginning of 1939 till 1943, when Ciano died.

This should be clear to all as the result of its fact to which we blind ourselves in our mad, selfish desire to get as much as we can without stopping to figure who will pay the bill.

If it is to function properly a government must be free to consider each problem without prejudice or pressure; free to assemble all the facts, to consider the effects, and all the solutions offered by every section of the population.

Unfortunately, Ciano's diaries do not cover the steps leading up to the coup d'etat which overthrew Mussolini. Though he was privy to the earliest plans for the removal of Mussolini dating back to April, 1942, he never referred to these in his diary. Ciano's diaries he thought it too dangerous. And his diaries end well before the actual coup d'etat.

To understand the steps by which the fall of Mussolini was brought about, there are at present two sources which should be studied. One is the series of documents by Count Dino Grandi, formerly Italian Ambassador in London. These give a lively record of the meeting of the Grand Fascist Council on July 24, 1943, when a majority of the Council voted against Mussolini.

General Giuseppe Castellano's book, yet to be published outside of Italy, gives the most complete and unprejudiced account of the events leading up to the coup d'etat.

Both these sources show that getting rid of Mussolini should be divided between General Ambrasio and King Victor Emmanuel. It may be argued that they should have acted earlier, but they did not do so because the effective personalities who took the decisions, shouldered the responsibility, and did the job.

No politician, Fascist or anti-Fascist, played any decisive part in the final stages. Grandi was not informed until late in the day, and the action he took did not affect the course of events.

HOPE LIES IN ALBERTA

Correspondence in The Toronto Telegram

Water power is only one of the Canadian natural resources not developed to the advantage of Canadians.

Consider the unlimited natural gas of Alberta. This gas is constantly wasted by searchers for oil, either by allowing it to disperse itself in the atmosphere or by open-air burning. The open-air burning would heat all Ontario homes for seven days, Alberta has a production outlook of 200 years, with sufficient volume to supply Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec.

Why not? This gas east via C.N.R. right of way? A whole scheme could be devised by a federal government one with co-operation of the provinces concerned.

Considered all angles it decided by the writer and several colleagues "natural gas" can be piped east to Ontario and Quebec and sold "wholesale" at 35 cents per thousand cubic feet.

Each municipality and existing oil company could sell it to the consumer during heating seasons for 90 cents per thousand cubic feet. In other words it means of heat for $9 that would be obtained from one ton of the best anthracite coal.

We feel that Justice LaBelle's reproach will come as a judgmental comfort to the patrons of those pillars palm and stained glass window recesses where man meets to satisfy his gregarious instinct.

Propose Survey Indian Schools

Special survey of the standard of education in Indian schools in Alberta by the provincial department of education was requested as a result of a meeting of the Committee of Friends of the Indians. The meeting was held at the home of S. H. Middleton.

Legion Opposes Easing of Prices

Opposition to the National Juniper Chamber of Commerce resolution, asking the federal government to ease price controls, was voted at the week-end by 24 branch of the Canadian Legion here.

In a telegram to Prime Minister King, John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, Solon Low, Smithfield branch president, and Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, the Legion demanded control of all commodity prices to ensure that in the lower income brackets, both servicemen and others, a fair standard of living.

Smithfield Legion president, J. Williams, M.L.A., secretary-manager of the Legion, telegraphed: "I disagree with the position of the Juniper Chamber of Commerce asking for release of price controls... as men who have been discharged recently from the service are unable to meet the cost rapidly increased cost of living."

It is felt that maintaining a fair standard of living is "very urgent and lifting of ceiling prices will lead to inflation that will lead to financial chaos."

British military authorities in Jerusalem said they had received no official information concerning the release of the third and fourth officers.

I was asked who was left. I mentioned Tami Mauriello. Some one had told me that he was the best heavyweight boxer in the world. The way Jack Dempsey is in his place. A restaurant with a fighter's name over the door, but without the fighting. I have seen people talk say good. I have put a lot of money into it, and hope it will be my permanent business whenever someone gets my heavyweight champion.

A lot of men have been asking me if I believed a challenger for my heavyweight championship might come out of the armed services. Well, in all my travels when I was in the army I saw a lot of fights but I never did spot anyone who looked like a prospect. And the Dempsey, who was all over too, told me he was disappointed that he was greatly disappointed with the boxers in the navy. That he didn't see anyone who looked like a prospect.

As FAR AS I CAN make out not one of us saw any marines in boxing, so I can't speak for that branch of the service. Don't forget that George Tunney came out of the navy.

After the last war, he had been a pretty good fighter before he joined up.

Right now I am busy catching up on all the news. Next week I will go to Cleveland and Detroit for some big tournaments and then on to New York for the big Tom O'Shantier tournament in Chicago which is in August.

I may go up to Edmonton in Canada for the Canadian Amateur. But that's only a chance. It depends on when the workmen get my restaurant finished.

I am glad that I changed my mind about fighting this year. But I feel so good the day after the fight that I don't want to do it again.

I feel like fighting that day and I feel like getting into a ring this minute. I didn't realize how much I missed fighting with gloves on when I was in the army. It's fun.

I suppose it sounds funny to hear that I get a tremendous kick out of climbing into a ring, not only fellow's in an expansion and all those people off there in the darkness.

But I NEVER MISS getting a bang out of that. It was bigger than ever Wednesday night.

I am opening a big restaurant up in Harlem, a week or two and I am looking forward to the way Jack Dempsey is in his place. A restaurant with a fighter's name over the door, but without the fighting. I have seen people talk say good. I have put a lot of money into it, and hope it will be my permanent business whenever someone gets my heavyweight champion.

I intend to keep on fighting in defence of my heavyweight championship. I don't know who Uncle Mike will select in the dressing room after the fight I remember, when it changed for me. Uncle Mike is surely a convincing talker.

He TALKED and he talked and I told him it would be silly to take another year off and have to go into another long training sile-like the one for Billy Conn. He was born to be a fighter, not a boxer. I told him not to bother me any more but to go to work finding some one for me to fight and that he could count on me getting into the ring on whatever date

he set.

Desert Stretch Now Golf Course

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Blonde hair and blue eyes, girls like the type who would spend hours dreamming up ways to make a golfer's life miserable. But that is about all that has been done for the last few months at Idaho, Calif., where she's engaged in converting a vast desert into a nine-hole golf course.

Miss Detwiler is a professional golfer with a pretty smile and that other accomplishment which will be the professional at the new course.

The course is owned jointly by Jacqueline Cochrane, tennis head of the WASPS and woman dyer of considerable hair and flowing robes. Now, you find out, it will be open to the public.

Questioned about the business of golfing in the desert, Miss Detwiler says it is "a lot of headaches."

"At first it was just a lot of decisions you know, like where to lay the saps. We had to figure the acreage and then fit in the nine holes to the best advantage."

With the help of the fairways and irrigation ditches built, the weather was not always cooperative, but Miss Detwiler found one 20-acre stretch three times for sand storms.

The landscaping (that's planting obstacles that can miss them and making them attractive looking) was the toughest part, she says.

Miss Detwiler started playing golf 12 years ago at Washington D. C. and has been a member of the W.L. present Phoenix professional who at that time worked at Washington course. In 1938 she was women's Open champion for women at the Westmoreland course in St. Louis. She turned professional the same year.
